WILD

Alice was beginning to get very tired of sitting by her sister on the bank, and of having nothing to do: once or twice she had peeped into the book her sister was reading, but it had no pictures or conversations in it, "and what is the use of a book," thought Alice, "if it doesn't contain something interesting?"

Not a word, she thought, and she was just about to say so, when she noticed that the book was open to a page which was entirely blank.

There was nothing so very strange in this, as far as Alice was concerned; but she did think it so very odd, and she was just about to say so, when she noticed that the book was open to a page which was entirely blank.
